Across Staffordshire there are many people whose work helps to make their communities more compassionate. Community developers are found in all areas, from volunteers to librarians, befrienders, to housing officials, health centre receptionists to church workers, we all have a role to play.

The South Staffordshire End of Life Care Action Alliance are committed to working with and supporting organisations across Staffordshire to engage with their communities around end of life care and this FREE Conference is the launch pad for a community of practice which will offer further FREE training and Community Development in the context of end of life care. If you work in the community or with the community, this conference is for you.

This FREE conference brings together two people who are world renowned in the field of community development in end of life care. Cormac Russell and Dr. Julian Abel will both inspire and excite you as they present their work on how a real difference can be made when organisations work together. There will also be an opportunity to shape future training and events, to ensure you are getting targeted support possible in order to support people at end of life care in your own communities.
